University of Michigan researchers are seeking volunteers to participate in a virtual focus group to evaluate communication about cancer risk in the Arab population in Michigan.

The goal of this research study is to increase access and utility of genetic counseling services to Arab-American patients with a personal or family history of cancer.

What is involved?

You will be asked to participate in a 90-minute focus group conducted online through Zoom that will involve a discussion facilitated by a moderator who is bilingual in Arabic and English. The moderator will ask you to discuss any challenges you experienced talking about cancer in your family and what would help you to have these discussions with your family members.

Participants will receive a $25 gift card for participating in the focus group.
